CORAM : HON'BLE MR.JUSTICE P.B.MAJMUDAR

ORAL JUDGEMENT

By filing this petition, the petitioner-detenu has challenged his detention order dated 22-02-2004. By the said order, the petitioner is detained as a "bootlegger" under PASA. Along with the order of detention, petitioner is also served with the grounds of detention. In the grounds of detention, there is a reference about two criminal cases pending against the petitioner. Both these cases are registered under Bombay Prohibition Act. It is alleged that the petitioner is dealing in foreign liquor. After being satisfied subjectively, the detaining authority has passed order of detention against the petitioner, which is impugned in this petition.

2) Mr.Kachhavah, learned advocate for the petitioner submitted that there is a delay in deciding the representation of the petitioner. It is submitted by him that the petitioner has made a representation to the detaining authority on 25th February, 2004 and the same was decided by the State Government on 5th March, 2004, therefore, there is a delay in deciding representation of the petitioner and on this ground, present petition is required to be allowed.

3) To substantiate his say, the learned advocate for the petitioner has relied upon a decision of this Court in NARAYAN TUKARAM BADDI v. State of Gujarat & Ors. reported in 1996 (1) GLR 31, wherein on the ground of unexplained delay in considering the representation, this Court has set aside the detention order. In the aforesaid case, the Court was concerned with a case wherein the petitioner was detained under the provisions of the Prevention of Black Marketing and Maintenance of Supplies of Essential Commodities Act. The detenu therein made a representation, which was disposed of after a considerable delay and delay was not satisfactorily explained. This Court held that the authorities may act with utmost promptness in disposing of the representation. While quashing the detention order passed against the detenu, this Court held that right is guaranteed to every detenu of making representation at the earliest opportunity against the order of detention and as a necessary corollary by using words "as soon as may be" in Article 22 (5) of the Constitution of India, the anxiety on the part of the framers of the Constitution of India to inform the detenu of the grounds of detention is reflected. This Court further observed that once the earliest opportunity is provided to make a representation against the order of detention, correspondingly, there is a constitutional obligation for the speedy and expeditious consideration of such representation by the authority. This Court further held that utmost promptitude, expedition and diligence is expected from the authority to consider such representation. Even though no time limit is prescribed for the purpose of deciding representation, any indifference, avoidable delay or remissness on the part of the authority in considering the representation would vitiate the continued detention of the detenu.

4) Ms.Archana Raval, learned AGP, submitted that the representation of the petitioner dated 25th February, 2004 was sent to the State Government on 26th February, 2004. It is submitted by her that so far as State Government is concerned, she has not received any instruction as to when the State Government has received the said representation and when the same was decided, therefore, she is not in a position to state whether there is any delay on the part of the State Government or not. Apart from that, even no reply is filed by the State Government and the delay in deciding representation of the petitioner has remained unexplained. It is a settled position of law that the representation is required to be dealt with promptly and if there is any delay, the same is required to be explained properly. In that view of the matter, since the representation of the petitioner is not dealt with forthwith, this petition is required to be allowed. As further detention of the petitioner would be violative of Article 22 (5) of the Constitution of India, the same is held to be illegal.

5) In view of above discussion, this petition is allowed. The continuous detention of the detenu is held to be illegal and the detenu, Sanjay Dolatrao Patil is ordered to be set at liberty forthwith, if he is not required in connection with any other case. Rule is made absolute.
